REPORT TO THE MISSOURI PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION
REGARDING CASE NUMBER OO-99-43
ON THE MATTER OF AN INVESTIGATION INTO PUBLIC UTILITY PREPAREDNESS FOR THE YEAR 2000 (Y2K)

Procedural History

On August 18, 1998, the Missouri Public Service Commission (Commission) established Case No. OO-99-43 for the purpose of “ascertaining the state of preparedness of all regulated utilities within the state of Missouri as well as municipalities, cooperatives and all other utility entities which come under the jurisdiction of the Commission for the purpose of safety.” The Commission directed each such entity “to file with the Commission a completed and verified copy” of an attached preparedness survey. All companies on the Commission’s Utility Service List, along with interstate pipelines, cooperatives and municipal utilities, were mailed the Commission’s Order of August 18, 1998, and accompanying survey. Over 1200 surveys were mailed in the case.

On October 22, 1998, the Commission issued an order that adopted the requests for protective orders in the case and also directed the Staff of the Missouri Public Service Commission (Staff) to “review and report” on the responses received. Specifically, the Staff was directed to list those entities that did not return an entry of appearance, those that did not return a completed survey, and those that returned those items but whose response was not substantially complete. The order stated that Staff could also address any other issues it believes should be brought to the Commission’s attention.

Survey Administration and Analysis

In response to the Commission’s Order dated, October 22, 1998, Staff has prepared a spreadsheet (Attachment A), which indicates those companies that did not return an entry of appearance; those that did not return a completed survey; as well as those that did return the requested documents, as directed by from the Commission’s order. The spreadsheet also captures data from the completed surveys to assist in understanding utility Y2K readiness. Specifically, Staff recorded each company’s current status of Y2K activities as requested by the survey, the planned date for year 2000 compliance, anticipated costs, and whether or not the company has addressed Y2K compliance with its vendors. A second spreadsheet, (Attachment B), which is filed under protective order, presents the responses of utilities who filed their documents as "highly confidential." Please note that all of the information provided for Column J through M, of Attachment B, are deemed proprietary and/or highly confidential. Where the term proprietary appears on the spreadsheet, the entities responding to the survey did not file any other information but instead responded with the term "proprietary."

Staff has also recorded any additional filings, including requests for extensions of time, motions to file out-of-time and motions for protective orders. This spreadsheet can be sorted in a number of ways to provide the Commission with Y2K data regarding a specific area of the state, a specific industry, by cost or other data.

Thirty-five surveys were returned to the Commission as undeliverable and are also indicated on the spreadsheet. Thirty-one utilities did not file an entry of appearance or a completed survey, but submitted a letter that may have addressed some of the survey questions. Letter responses are indicated on the spreadsheet and Staff included information contained in the letters that addressed survey questions.

Because the Utility Service List is segmented by utility type, including gas, electric, steam-heat, water, sewer and various types of telecommunication providers, companies received an order and survey for each type of utility service they provide. For example, if a company provides electricity, gas and steam heat, it received three surveys. Likewise, if a utility provides local telecommunication service, long distance service and has payphones, it was issued three surveys. Utilities that provide both water and sewer services were mailed two surveys. Generally, these companies provided only one Entry of Appearance and one completed survey response, even though they appear on the Utility Service List multiple times and were mailed more than one survey.

Some companies do business in the state under different names than those represented on the Utility Service List or have ceased doing business in the state but have not cancelled their certification with the Commission. Some addresses that appear on the Utility Service List are different than those addresses appearing on filed entries of appearance, survey responses or on letters submitted to the Commission. Staff added names and addresses to the spreadsheet for purposes of recording filings when discrepancies existed between the Utility Service List and information being filed by the utilities. Staff has attempted to record all entries of appearance and survey data, although in some cases, the company responding to the Commission was not on the original Utility Services List used for mailing.

According to the Commission's docket system, the total number of survey responses received at the writing of this report is 431. While that number appears low, given that approximately 1200 surveys were mailed, the 431 figure represents many companies that provide more than one type of utility service in the state. These companies were mailed more than one survey and order, but provided one response for all of their operations. The Commission is still receiving survey responses and Staff will continue to record incoming responses.

Survey Summary

In summarizing the survey responses, almost all companies indicated that they plan to be Y2K compliant by the year 2000 or are currently compliant. A small number of survey responses did not specify a date by which the utility planned to be compliant and some smaller companies indicated that they did not use computers in their operations.

While survey responses generally were very positive, regarding Missouri state utility Y2K preparedness, the National Regulatory Research Institute (NRRI) in its recent publication, "In the Public Interest: Public Utility Commission Leadership in Y2K Mitigation and Preparation" indicated that "the ability of commissions to make judgements about utility efforts to address Y2K issues will be substantially complicated by the extreme sensitivity of the information provided to commissions by the utilities." Utility Y2K activity is being monitored by many entities including federal and state regulatory bodies, the Securities Exchange Commission and company consumers. Utilities must be responsive to the requests for information while at the same time, work to ensure their Y2K compliance.

Based upon the responses received to the survey, the telephone calls and letters from Missouri utilities, it is Staff's opinion that increased awareness by utilities of Y2K issues has resulted from the creation of this docket.
