MISSOURI
Public Service Commission

(A) Calls are measured from the Rate Center of the Subscriber's terminal or switch location to the Rate Center of the destination of the call.

(B) The distance between the Rate Center of the Subscriber's switch and destination point is calculated by using the vertical ("V") and horizontal ("H") coordinates found in AT&T Tariff FCC No. 10, in the following manner:

Step 1 Obtain the V and H coordinates for the originating and terminating rate centers.

Step 2 Obtain the differences between the "V" coordinates for each of the Rate Centers. Obtain the difference between the H coordinates.

Step 3 Square each difference obtained in step 2 above.

Step 4 Add the squares of the "V" difference and "H" difference obtained in Step 3.

Step 5 Divide the sum of the squares obtained in Step 4 above by 10. Round to the next higher whole number if any fraction results from the division.

Step 6 Obtain the square root of the whole number obtained in Step 5. Round to the next higher whole number if any fraction is obtained. This is the mileage between the Rate Centers.

Step 7 The formula is as follows:

$$\frac{\sqrt{(V_2 - V_1)^2 + (H_2 - H_1)^2}}{10}$$

4.8 Emergency Calls

Subscriber shall configure its pay telephone, PBX, or other switch vehicle from which a customer places a call so that 911 emergency calls, where available, and similar emergency calls will be automatically routed to the emergency answering point for the geographical location where the call originated without the intervention of ACT. Emergency calls which do reach a ACT operator shall be handled in accordance with ACT standard operating procedures.

4.8.1 Standard Emergency Operating Procedures

911 calls are not routed but completed through the local network. If a caller dials an ACT operator or a 911 call is mistakenly routed to ACT, ACT's systems are designed to handle the call efficiently and expeditiously. ACT operator software retains an emergency number database associated with the originating location of the call. A single key stroke by the operator connects the caller and the operator to the appropriate emergency answering agency at the originating locations of the call. The operator remains in connection until he or she has verified that the caller and the emergency answering service location personnel have established conversation and that the caller location has been identified. No billing applies to emergency calls.
